

Creating Your Marketing Plan

Choose Your Strategy. Commit to Action. Build a Consistent Lead Flow.

📌 Introduction to Building a Plan That Works for You

This lesson guides you in creating a customized, realistic 30-day marketing plan that fits your current time, budget, and strengths. Instead of trying to do everything, you'll learn how to choose a focused marketing track, build a weekly action plan, and track your results. By the end of this lesson, you'll have a launch-ready plan designed to generate consistent leads without overwhelm—and a challenge to put it into action starting now.

✅ What You'll Learn in This Lesson

This lesson covers:

- How to assess your time, budget, and personality
 - The difference between unpaid, paid, and hybrid marketing
 - How to choose 2–3 strategies that work together
 - How to structure a weekly schedule you can stick to
 - Why tracking matters and how to do it
 - How to adjust your plan without losing focus
 - A 30-day challenge to launch and refine your plan

📌 Step 1: Know Where You Are

- Assess your available time and marketing budget
 - Consider your strengths—are you more hands-on or systems-oriented?
 - Be honest about your current capacity—not your ideal future

📌 Step 2: Pick a Marketing Track

- Unpaid marketing: Best if you have time but little budget (e.g., driving for dollars, social media, cold calling)
 - Paid marketing: Best if you have budget but less time (e.g., SMS, ringless voicemail, paid lists, hiring a VA)
 - Hybrid: A mix of both—balance effort and automation

📌 Step 3: Choose 2–3 Strategies

- Primary Strategy: Your core lead generator (e.g., cold calling, direct mail, SMS)
 - Supporting Strategy: Helps with follow-up or visibility (e.g., CRM campaigns, social posts, RVM)
 - Optional Third Strategy: One you'll test or add once consistent (e.g., bandit signs, YouTube content)
Pick strategies that match your personality and schedule—not just what others are doing.

📌 Step 4: Build Your Weekly Plan

- Assign specific tasks to specific days (e.g., Monday = outreach, Friday = follow-up)
 - Put your schedule in writing and treat it like a real appointment
 - The goal is to build consistent marketing habits—not one-off actions

📌 Step 5: Track Your Progress

- Use a CRM (like REI Blackbook) or spreadsheet to log:
 - Leads generated
 - Conversations started
 - Follow-ups scheduled
 - Contracts signed
 - Review weekly to identify what's working and where to adjust

📌 Set Expectations—Then Take Action

- Expect to learn as you go—don't expect perfection
 - Give each strategy 30–60 days before changing course
 - Focus on consistent action, not instant results

Final Tip: Stay Focused, Stay Flexible

- You're not married to your first plan
- Focus for 30 days, then evaluate and adjust
- Grow your strategy as your time and skills grow

Student Challenge – Launch Your 30-Day Marketing Plan

Here's how to put this lesson into action:

- Pick your marketing track: unpaid, paid, or hybrid
- Choose two or three strategies based on your strengths
- Build a weekly schedule you can follow
- Track everything in a CRM or lead tracker
- Share your plan with the Partner Driven community
- Work your plan for 30 days, then post what you learned
- Repeat the cycle at Day 60 with lessons and results

You don't need to be perfect. You just need to be consistent.

Your lead flow—and your business—starts with this plan. Let's build your future, one lead at a time.
