

Signage Marketing – High-Visibility, Budget-Friendly Lead Generation

📌 Introduction to Signage Marketing

This lesson introduces signage marketing as one of the most proven and affordable forms of paid marketing for real estate investors. Physical signs like bandit signs, car magnets, and yard signs help you generate motivated seller leads in your local area—24/7.

When placed strategically, signage works around the clock, delivering your message in high-traffic areas where your ideal audience already lives and drives. With a small budget and consistent action, signage can become a reliable source of local leads.

✅ What to Expect and How It Works

This lesson covers:

- What signage marketing is and why it works
 - What types of signs get the most attention
 - Where and how to place your signs effectively
 - Budget and setup tips for beginners
 - Five proven messages that generate leads
 - A 7-day challenge to take action and track results

📌 Why Signage Marketing Works

- High visibility in the neighborhoods where you want to do deals
- Low-cost, high-impact—your signs work for you 24/7
- Reaches offline sellers who aren't searching online
- Repetition builds trust and familiarity

📝 Example: A homeowner drives by your sign every day for two weeks. When they finally decide to sell, yours is the number they remember.

📌 Costs and Budget for New Investors

- Bandit signs: $1–$3 each (in bulk)
- Stakes/frames: Under $2 apiece
- Sharpies for hand-written signs: $10–$20
- Printed starter packs: $30–$50
- Monthly signage budget: $50–$150 is often plenty

You can order online via sites like Vistaprint or search for “bandit sign printing + [your city]” to find a local printer.

📌 Time Investment and Setup

- Initial setup: 1–2 hours to design/order signs
- Weekly maintenance: 1 hour to check, replace, and rotate locations
- Optional: batch your routes or outsource to a helper for efficiency

📌 Consistency and smart placement are key to maximizing return.

📌 Dos and Don'ts of Signage

- ✓ Do: Use bold, simple messages
 - ✓ Do: Make your phone number large and readable
 - ✓ Do: Place signs legally and visibly
 - ✗ Don't: Use small fonts or cluttered layouts
 - ✗ Don't: Ignore city regulations—check for local restrictions
 - ✗ Don't: Forget to answer calls or follow up

📌 Best Practices to Maximize Results

- Use a local area code to increase trust
- Answer calls live or return voicemails quickly
- Track which signs get calls using Google Voice or CallRail
- Keep a log to track location, message, and call volume

📌 Over time, this helps you identify what's working—and what's not.

📌 5 Sample Sign Messages That Work

Here are five clear, high-performing examples:

“We Buy Houses – Fast Cash – (555) 123-4567”

“Sell Your House As-Is – Any Condition – (555) 123-4567”

“Avoid Foreclosure – Cash Offers in 24 Hours”

“Need to Sell Your House Fast? Call Now!”

“We Buy Homes in [City Name] – No Repairs Needed”

These signs should be easy to read in a few seconds and focused on solving a problem.

Key Takeaways

- Signage marketing is affordable, simple, and works around the clock
 - Clear, bold messages in high-traffic locations create real opportunities
 - Consistency, follow-up, and local compliance are critical
 - Tracking and testing help you get better results over time
 - One good call can lead to one great deal—and that’s all it takes to make signage worth it

Student Challenge – Your Signage Sprint

This week’s challenge:

- Create one simple, bold sign (hand-written or printed)
- Order 10–25 signs and place them in five legal, high-visibility spots
- Track all calls, texts, and leads for 7 days
- Record location, message, and call volume
- After 7 days, analyze your results to find the winning message or placement

 With just one weekend and a handful of signs, you could uncover your next deal. Let’s go.
